The last bit of the wrecks they wrought Was burned up yesterday. When the tide goes out. The shore looks dark and sad with doubt. The landmarks are all lost.

For the tide to turn Men patient, wait, men restless yearn. Sweet channels they have crossed In boats that rocked with glee, Stretch now bare stony roads that burn And lead away from me.

When the tide comes in In hearts, at once the hearts begin logether to be glad. What the tide had brought They do not care, they have not sought, All joy they ever had The new joy multiplies;

All pain by which it may be bought Seems paltry sacrifice. When the tide goes out, The hearts are wrung with fear and doubt; All trace of joy seems lost. Will the tide return?

In restless questioning they yearn, With hands unclasped, uncrossed They weep on separate ways. Ah! darling, shall we ever learn Love's tidal hours and days?
